Nuppeppō

ENCYCLOPEDIA

is Japanese Yokai described as having a flabby appearance and a pungent body odor. Nuppeppō is passive and almost entirely harmless, but its body odor is said to rival that of rotting flesh. Some claim that it is actually decaying flesh. There is a rumor that states that those who eat its flesh shall have eternal youth.

Nurikabe

Nurikabe manifests as a wall that impedes or misdirects walking travelers at night. Trying to go around is futile as it extends itself forever. Knocking on the lower left part of the wall makes it disappear.

おいしい妖 ENCYCLOPEDIA

Karakasa / Kasa-obake

They are generally umbrellas with one eye and jump around with one leg, but sometimes they have two arms or two eyes among other features, also sometimes they have long tongues. Sometimes, but rarely, they even have two feet. Some says that they're tsukumogami that old umbrellas turned to.

Hitodama

Hitodama are balls of fire that mainly float in the middle of night. They are said to be "souls of the dead that have separated from their bodies."
